President Garfield's Sons.

Washington Cor. Troy Times. President Garfield does not like his boys to be coddled. In the letter he wrote to Dr. Hawkes at Montana, inviting him to come and be their preceptor this summer, he stipulated that they should have rigid duties required of them, and be treated like other citizens' sons. The connection of this gentleman with the President's family has been mutually pleasing. He is a quiet, forcible man, a bachelor of perhaps 35, the son of a New England Methodist minister, a graduate of Brown University, and afterward of the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania. The boys cling to him with great confidence and affection. Donald Rockwell, who is always called "Don," studies with Harry and James Garfield in preparation for college, and since the studies were resumed, they have been conducted at Colonial Rockwell's residence on Corcoran street, some distance from the White House, where also Mollie is staying with her friend, Lulu Rockwell. Jim sends the Presidential carriage for his tutor every morning, and sends him home in it at 1 o'clock when the day's studies are done, with Albert, the "tony" colored driver, in charge. Dr. Hawkes goes horseback-riding or rowing with the boys quite often after school hours. He finds them bright, teachable and gentlemanly as pupils, and intelligent and confiding as companions. The crude, eccentric sayings and doings that appeared in print accredited to the President's sons, especially Jim and Irvin, are gross exaggerations. They are well-bred and well-controlled boys of naturally strong individuality. That is all. Jim greatly disliked the newspaper name "Jimmie" that has been carelessly given him since his father's injury. He expresses himself on the subject with all the vigor of a 16-year old. "Jim" is his invariable home name, and it has the snap and vigor that he likes. The pleasant northeast chamber, in the business part of the Mansion, that was of late the boys' study-room, is now taken possession of by O. L. Judd, the Telegraphic Secretary of the President.

Improvement in Gunnery.

Messrs. Krupp have succeeded in perfecting a process which will lead to a material reduction in the expenditure on ordnance for the German navy and army. All the heavier Krupp guns consist of steel body strengthened by hoops, the 304-centimetre guns having three tiers of hoops, the 26-centimetre and 24-centimetre, two, and the remainder one tier. The interior of the body, subjected to the greatest wear and tear, becomes rapidly worn out, and hitherto it had been found necessary after the very first 1,000 rounds had been fired, to melt up the whole gun on account of the damaged condition of the bore, although the outer parts of the pieces were practically as good and sound as ever. Since the construction of these outer hoops is very costly, the idea occurred to one of the members of the firm that it might be possible to localize the melting operation; and this it has now been found possible to accomplish by treating the body of the piece with a cold producing preparation of carbonic acid, which contracts it to such an extent that the hoops, expanded at the same time by the application of heat, can be easily removed.

Does Chicago "Doctor" Her Thermometer.

Joliet Sun.

Chicago people are jubilant over the fine weather they are having. To hear a Chicagoan talk you would think that he didn't reside on this mundane sphere—that Chicago had been suddenly caught up and wafted by the gentle breezes to some other clime. The complacency these fellows exhibit and the air of superiority they hold over people who don't live in Chicago, and the pity they manifest to such, are exasperating to the highest degree. The fact of the matter is, there is no place like Chicago in the estimation of a Chicagoan. They either "doctor" their thermometers or it is a fact that these little instruments indicate less heat than in any other city in this latitude.

Women's Sayings.

Said Queen Christina: It is a species of agreeable servitude to be under an obligation to one whom we esteem.

Said Lady Montague: It goes far to reconcile me to being a woman, when I reflect that I am thus in no danger of ever marrying one.

Said Jane Porter: He that easily believes rumors has the principal with him to augment rumors. It is strange to see the ravenous appetite with which some destroyers of character and happiness fix upon the sides of the innocent and unfortunate.

Said Joanna Baillie: Some men are born to feast and not to fight; their sluggish minds, o'er in fair honor's field, still on the dianer turn,

If you want to save money, go to J. F. Fredrick, where there is no advantage taken.

Knust will continue to sell the large stock on him and satisfy yourselves.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA.

A friend, who takes a generous interest in all educational and progressive movements, has been at some pains during a recent visit to San Francisco to learn how the University of California stands since the recent change. He has conversed with many men who know of the facts in the case, and their judgment says that the institution has received a heavy blow, from which it will not recover for years.

We quote this opinion because it is reliable and sustains our position from the first. Although far away we have been able to see across the intervening distance. The injury might have been expected. One need not participate in a concert in order to know that a tin pan accompaniment will spoil it, neither is it necessary to live under the shadow of an educational institution in order to know that pot house politicians and preached-out preachers can cripple its usefulness.

As we have said, the regents have struck at the life of the institution. They have besides insulted and driven from their homes men who have grown grey in the cause of education.

All this has been done, and to satisfy ignorant pretensions, personal spite and political purposes. The entire movement has been an insult from men of alleged education to the acknowledged representatives of learning, and that primitive decency which finds consideration among liberal men in high station has been abolished from among the Regents. We still acknowledge that there are kernels of sense among this bushels of Regents.

A SUFFICIENT ANSWER.

Below we give the answer of the Eureka Leader to one part of a recent question propounded by this paper. It will throw a rush light upon the question.

The GAZETTE says that "the stone walls of the capital at Carson are thick. The people built it and want to know what is going on inside." If that is all their curiosity shall be satisfied. Every day about 10 o'clock the officers saunter into their offices, open their mail, read their papers and smoke their cigars. After a while they go out on the east porch of the capital, seat themselves in arm chairs and talk politics. They commune with one another as to whether it will be worth while to run for their respective positions again at their reduced salaries, and wonder what they will go at "when we get out of here."

The dwelling of James B. Day, near Baker's Landing, Clackamas Co., was destroyed by fire Wednesday. Loss, $1,200; no insurance.

Aabel Bush, the Salem banker, succeeds William Reed of the Scotch bank in Portland, as President of the Salem Flouring Mills Company.

The farmers and ware-house men have decided to hold their wheat until actually sold and paid for. This is done in opposition to a combination by the masters of ocean transportation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Washoe Woodchopper.

A hard-working man from Washoe who worked about nine months a year and seventeen hours a day, has but one picnic a year. Then he wakes everybody up. He came in once with about $700 and annoyed the tiger until it bit him for $600. He was about to leave with the other $40 when he spied a chuck-a-luck game. He stopped and cheerfully put down $20. He lost. Then he looked at the money, smiled, and snapping his fingers, said:

"Come easy, go easy!"

you, I earned you choppin' wood. Guess I'll go to work. Good-day, boys."

This was with W— a yearly occurrence.

"He Would be Back."

A traveler recently met with an accident. His horse stumbled and fell. To prevent further disaster, he hastily jumped from the buggy and knelt on the horse's neck to keep him down. Help soon arrived.

"Unhook those traces, will you?"

The new-comer was afraid of being kicked and was naturally slow. The horse was struggling all the time.

"Come here and set on his neck; I'll unhook 'em," said the traveler.

He went about the work vigorously, and the horse kicked him in the stomach, sending the hasty man some fifteen yards into the ditch. The minute he struck ground he yelled:

"Keep your seat, Horace, I'll be right back."

Fair's Nose.

The Carson Tribune of last evening says: Pete Fitzgerald, who has the reputation of being a professional fighter, approached Senator Fair in Virginia, yesterday, and said: "See here, Fair, I'm broke, and got to have a job." In his usual child-like and bland manner, James replied: "Well, my son, I guess you'd better pack up your blankets and go to Montana."

At this Fitzgerald reached for the Senatorial nasal organ, and giving it an affectionate squeeze, remarked: "You s— of a b—h, if you were as poor as I am, you'd steal the blankets."

A Wholesale House.

Every indication shows that Reno is destined to take her place as a wholesale depot and supply point for the great interior. E. Chielovich, of the well-known and popular Wine House, is now making arrangements for a wholesale liquor depot at this point. The sidewalk is covered with casks of liquor, and carloads of choice wines and beers are on the road. When Chielovich moves he means business.

As Usual.

Harry Bennett, Esq., U. S. Attorney for Idaho, is on to-day's overland going home. Mr. Bennett is favorably impressed with Reno, and says he may come here to live. Bennett is young in the profession, but has by superior ability gained a high reputation and position for himself.

Cattle Fed.

Stockmen should carefully read O. C. Ross' ad in another column. His hay is of the best, and all stock fed in his charge will receive the best of care.

A Society of French Athletes.

Whithall Review. Henri Rochefort is a pronounced atheist. He is the link between Clemenceau and the crew of solidaries who have literally sworn to devote their whole lives to the bringing of the idea of a Supreme Being into contempt. Calumny is one of their acknowledged weapons. These crusaders of blasphemy are sometimes called "Les Jesuites Rogues," because they adopt the so-called maxim of Loyola that the end justifies the means. The solidaries are sometimes loathsome in their satanic apostolate. There are men in France who clutch their hands or spit when the name of God is mentioned. But their chief work is surrounding the dead-beds of their colleagues who turn pious and show a longing for the consolations of religion. The vow taken by a solidaire includes a promise to die a civil death and have a civil funeral. The picture is often a sad one. The sorrowing wife implores the dying husband to grant her wish, and the woman's tears at last begin to tell. At this point the solidaries begin their hideous task. They remind the worn-out patient of his promise and their permission to watch him in his last moments which he granted long ago. In the end the grief-stricken wife is conquered, the solidaire dies, and a civil interment takes place. Months afterwards the widow may be seen praying at the tomb of the lost one, over which she has placed a Christian emblem.

Honored and Blessed.

When a card of eminent physicians and chemists announced the discovery that by combining some well known valuable remedies, a new and powerful medicine was produced, which would cure such a wide range of diseases that most all other remedies could be dispensed with, many were skeptical; but proof of its merits by actual trial has dispelled all doubt, and to-day the discoverers of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, are honored and blessed by all as benefactors.
